

Inactive Stroke Certified Registered Nurse (SCRN®) Status

The American Board of Neuroscience Nursing (ABNN) developed the Inactive SCRN status to recognize SCRNs who temporarily do not meet eligibility requirements for recertification (whether it be practice hours or CE hours) and do not want to forfeit their credential. Inactive status is appropriate for those planning to meet the renewal eligibility requirements within a 3-year timeframe from their expiration date. Candidates may reactivate their certification anytime during the 3-year Inactive status period, once the established renewal eligibility requirements are met. At the time of renewal, continuing education credits and other requirements must meet the time frame as defined at the time of renewal (i.e. within 5 years of submitting the renewal application).

In order to be eligible for Inactive SCRN status, candidates must:

- be a current SCRN in the last year of their recertification cycle (i.e. due to expire December 31st of the current cycle)
- have a current, unrestricted RN license
- does not meet the recertification eligibility criteria, but is planning to return to stroke nursing (i.e. does not meet the practice hour requirements within the 5-year cycle OR does not meet the stroke CE hour requirement during their 5-year cycle.
- Applications must be submitted prior to the end of the grace period for their current renewal cycle (i.e., if the certification expires on December 31, 2023, the inactive application must be submitted before January 31, 2024.
- No submission of CEs is required at the time of applying for Inactive status, however, in order to regain full SCRN status, candidates must meet the CE requirement.

An individual who has been granted Inactive SCRN status may not represent himself/herself as a Stroke Certified Registered Nurse (SCRN). Candidates may not apply for Inactive Status and deferment of renewal for two consecutive certification cycles. If eligibility is not met at the end of the 3-year extension period, the certification will no longer be renewable except by meeting the current exam eligibility criteria, paying the examination fee, and passing the SCRN exam.
